Patrick Casey: American Identity Movement is Disbanding

My instincts have always been to go outside of the movement. I have never been interested in the infighting or intramural pettiness that is so much a part of the alt-right or whatever the rebrand name is this week. My views are not only reasonable but also idealistic and lofty. I don't simply want the Republican party or conservatism plus racism or a few redpills. I don't just want America with no non-Whites. I actual want a healthier White race and a worldview utterly divorced from conspiracy theories, partisanship, individualism, constitution worship or FBI statistics. We need to not simply think differently on top-down issues, but also in terms of how we see the worldview, our metapolitics if you will.

The American Identity Movement, which used to be called Identity Evorpa, was founded by Patrick Casey. Casey can charitably be described as a bad actor, and brutally as an unstable character. He has engaged in Fuentes-like disavowing of people like Richard Spencer and his organization has had endless infiltrations and successful doxes by antifa. AIM has been involved in events similar to the Proud Boys, e.g. marches, flyers, dust-ups in the street with antifa, in fact you could simply say AIM was the Proud Boys plus racism – reliably Republican yet Redpilled on race and the Jews perhaps.

> …founded in March 2019 to promote five principles: Nationalism, Identitarianism, Protectionism, Non-Interventionism, and Populism. Since then, our message has reached millions of Americans. AIM activists have engaged in community cleanups, organized food drives, peacefully disrupted numerous left-wing events, held dozens of flash demonstrations, placed thousands of flyers across the country, hosted conferences and speaking engagements, and facilitated networking between countless political dissidents. After much thought and discussion, however, we have determined that American Identity Movement has reached the limit of what a dissident membership organization can realistically achieve in these turbulent, repressive times. As such, AIM is hereby disbanded. For this reason, the disbanding of AIM is best understood as a strategic reorientation, one that will allow the dissident right to network, host events, create content, and engage in activism in more fruitful ways.

Nathan Damigo was a founding member and convicted felon who denounced the movement sometime after Charlottesville. What can only be called the official announcement of disbandment is delusional at best. Who really believes this organization that was slightly more edgy than the Proud Boys really accomplished anything other than having its members doxed? I agree that a membership organization for a dissident movement is basically painting a target on everyone's back. Dissident Whites are better in the battle of ideas than in the political arena, given that people are fired from their jobs, and their lives destroyed thereby, for a lot less. But it's not like this is a recent thing. Ever since Trump won this sort of economic terrorism by the far left and establishment has been critical to quashing White dissent. In conclusion, Patrick Casey is a bad actor with no vision and zero prudence. No serious White person should have anything to do with him in the future, should he try to rebrand for the umpteenth time. Exit, Patrick Casey.
